Artist Statement

Life seems to exist in multiple layers. Actions and reactions happen to all things around us shaping thoughts, feelings and creating outcomes. Something tangible evolves until even that thing becomes something new, whether handmade or by nature.
Life, for me, is moving things from one place to another.

Music drives the images in Frequency of Floating. Different moments of different songs. Memories of when they were first heard - lying in the dark with headphones or the small radio blasting from the top of our fridge. Photography chose me and I chose music as my subject, but after years of focusing my camera on people who create music I finally made time to do something I'd been circling for a while...attempt to capture music itself in visual form. I don't feel I've done that exactly but this series helps crack open what music stirs in me.

I'm also drawn to dream states, that floating space where things shift and breathe without needing to be literal. Working abstractly lets me explore feeling and rhythm rather than fixed meanings. This work sits inside my own archive, my own history, finding what was always there but unseen. I am creating new layers. Moving things from one place to another.
